Little Green Thumbs

Little Green Thumbs is a performance based program which teaches children about gardening. The creator of the program, Andrew Addenbrooke, is a pre-school teacher and a landscaper by trade.

The show Andrew puts together depends on the age of the audience, and he has something for kids from as young as two right up to the age of twelve.

As well as an appreciation for gardening, kids also get to dig in the dirt and plant their own tomato seedling to take home.

And if you're interested in landscaping solutions for early childhood - Little Green Thumbs offers those services as well.
