

Students stake own pathway to nutrition

DH193218

GROWING CONCERN: Andrew Addenbrooke helps fertilise the little minds of Zoe Lightbody and Braydon Nelson.

Picture: Dale Haberfield

WARRIGAL Rd State School students got their hands dirty last week when they planted their very own tomatoes.

The school was the latest place to host Little Green Thumbs, a program that teaches children about the importance of the environment and nutrition.

Little Green Thumbs is the brainchild of Andrew Addenbrooke, a former preschool teacher and landscaper who travels around southeast Queensland in his trailer.

■ Visit www.littlegreenthumbs.com.au.